What do you do after your MBBS degree?

After you do MBBS overseas and return to India, you will need to give a competency test also known as the MCI Screening test or the FMGE (Foreign Medical Graduate Examination) which is conducted by the National Board of Examination (NBE) in New Delhi. Once you pass this examination, you can get yourself registered with the MCI and practice medicine in India. There is approximately 70% pass rate in the last 2-3 years. Students who have cleared this examination have said that if you study in a reputed medical college like JFMED CU and also prepare for the test you can clear this test in the 1st attempt. The other option is to seek employment in EU or USA or other countries where your medical degree is fully recognized.
